DSpace Generating Thumbnails
Generating Thumbnails for PDF in DSpace

Generating Thumbnails

When you add bitstreams, thumbnails and content indexing is performed asynchronously by the 'dspacefilterWmedia' command attached to a cron task. By default, the cron task is set to run in the dspace users crontab once a night. You can select a more frequent interval, but be careful that you don't have so short an interval that runs overlap.

You can also run this process manually (for example, after you have loaded a batch of images, and you want to see the thumbnails). To do this, as the dspace user, run:

/dspace/bin/dspace filter-media
```

You can also run this process manually (for example, after you have loaded a batch of images, and you want to see the thumbnails). To do this, as the dspace user, run:

/usr/local/dspace/bin/dspace filter-media

This will scan the collection for all unthumbnailed/unindexed images and process them.

If you change the thumbnail size in the dspace.cfg file, or for some other reason want to delete all the thumbnails that were generated, you can run the following command to recreate them for all items. To do this, as the dspace user, run:

/usr/local/dspace/bin/dspace filter-media -f

With this editor you can view and alter the policies of an item, plus alter policies of individual item components: bundles and bitstreams. Briefly, an item is a container of bundles, and bundles, are containers of bitstreams. Containers usually have ADD/REMOVE/READ/WRITE policies, while bitstreams only have READ/WRITE policies.

You will notice an extra bundle and bitstream for each item, and those contain the license text for the item.

How do I use zip command to compress a folder?

The syntax is

zip -r filename.zip folder
zip -r filename.zip folder1 folder2
zip -r filename.zip /path/to/folder1 /path/to/file2
